How to service brivis ducted heating. How to use brivis ducted heating. How to turn off brivis ducted heating. How to use brivis central heating. How to program brivis ducted heating.

We get asked this question regularly, and on the face of it has a very simple answer. To buy one unit of mains gas (measured in kWh) you will pay about 4p / kWh. Conversely, one unit of electricity from the mains (also measure in kWh) will cost you about 15p/kWh. This means that gas is about 3-4 times cheaper than electricity per kWh. That said, there are a number of other factors that make the comparison far less simple. Gas boilers are not 100% efficient The first thing to complicates direct comparisons is that, while an electric radiator will turn 1 kWh of electricity into 1 unit of heat (i.e. they are 100% efficient), boilers won't. Even a brand new boiler will only be about 90% efficient. Even though the efficiency of a new gas boiler is not as high as an electrical equivalent, based on the fact it is so much cheaper for each unit of gas, mains gas still wins! It doesn't make a huge difference to the equation. >>> Should I replace my conventional boiler with a combi?
